KK Tax.

Know where you stand.

Return to contents page

Who we are.

Our brand gives people a clear, consistent understanding of what they can expect from KK Tax, wherever they first meet us: the website, a LinkedIn post, a letter or a conversation.

Our purpose is simple

Helping people know where they stand on tax.

How we work

- We explain your options in plain English, so you can act on the advice.
- We take time to understand your circumstances before recommending anything.
- We look at the whole position rather than one tax in isolation.
- We are practical and commercial: the tax effect of the decision in front of you, not general theory.
- We are discreet. Enquiries are treated in confidence.
- We work alongside your accountant or solicitor where that helps.

Our descriptor

KK Tax is a UK tax consultancy founded by Kishan Kavi in 2025. We give clear, practical advice on property tax, HMRC enquiries, business tax and private client matters.

Using the KK Tax logo

We use the KK Tax logo on all our materials, so people recognise the firm. The logo is the name itself, with the two Ks joined and a full stop in Signal orange.

It comes in three versions:

- Ink, for light backgrounds
- White, for dark backgrounds
- Black, for single-colour print

Where possible, use the Ink logo on a Paper or white background.

Small spaces

Where the full name will not fit, such as a browser tab or a profile picture, use the KK. square. Never use it beside the full logo.

Stacked logo: square spaces only

Further guidance

You can find the logo in every format in the brand pack: files 01 to 05, and the Extras folder for printers and designers.

Leaving clear space around the KK Tax logo

The logo should stand out and not sit too close to other text or images. To help, it has a minimum clear area around it.

Minimum clear space

Leave a space equal to the height of the capital K on every side, however large the logo is. Take extra care on the right: nothing should crowd the full stop.

Minimum size

On screen, at least 18 pixels tall. In print, at least 5 mm tall. Below that, use the KK. square.

Please do not

- Retype the name in another font
- Remove or recolour the full stop
- Stretch, rotate or add shadows
- Add a symbol or badge beside it
- Place the Ink logo on a busy photo

Colour palette.

When to use each colour

The primary palette should be used for nearly all KK Tax work, so the brand becomes familiar. It is deliberately close to black and white.

Ink and Paper should always dominate. Signal orange is an accent: the full stop, a button arrow, one short segment of a rule. If a page seems to need more colour, use more Ink.

Supporting colours

Cream and Stone are for backgrounds and panels. Graphite is for secondary text. Signal Deep is the darker orange for small text and links on light backgrounds.

CMYK, RGB or HEX?

CMYK is for professional printing, such as business cards. RGB is for documents on screen, such as Word and PowerPoint. HEX codes are for websites and email. The CMYK values are starting points: ask the printer for a proof before a print run.

Fonts.

What font to use?

Newsreader: for headlines and sub-headings. It is the serif used on the website and in designed materials.

Inter: for body text, captions and buttons in designed work.

Georgia and Arial: for day-to-day work where the brand fonts are not installed, including emails and general documents. Georgia for headings, Arial for text.

Font size

Use a minimum of 11pt for all documents. If a large print version has been requested, use 16 to 18pt.

How to get the fonts

Newsreader and Inter are free Google fonts. They are in the Fonts folder of the brand pack: double-click a file and choose Install.

Accessibility.

There is more to good accessibility than font size and colour contrast.

Many of the people who contact a tax adviser are older, anxious or reading on a phone. Clear, accessible communication helps all of them, and it reflects how we give advice: plainly.

Accessibility matters in everything we create, from the website to a letter about an HMRC enquiry.

Unsure?

Ask before you publish. Contact details are on the last page.

Some simple tips for accessible communications:

1. Add useful alt text to images on the website, LinkedIn and in documents, so screen readers can describe them.

2. Use subtitles on videos that have a voiceover. Many people watch with the sound off.

3. Use a minimum font size of 11pt for documents, and 16 to 18pt for large print.

4. Check colour contrast. The combinations on the next page have been tested.

5. Use real headings in Word (Heading 1, Heading 2) rather than bold text, so documents work with assistive technology.

6. Align text to the left.

7. Use capitals in hashtags (#KKTax, #StampDuty, not #kktax) so they are easier to read.

8. Use plain English. Name the tax in full the first time (Stamp Duty Land Tax, then SDLT), keep sentences short and explain any term a client may not know.

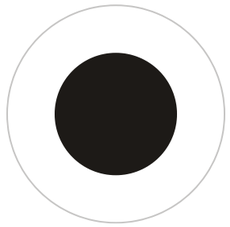

What font colours are accessible?

The Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) help make content readable for everyone. To meet level AA, use Ink text for body copy, and the combinations shown here for headings.

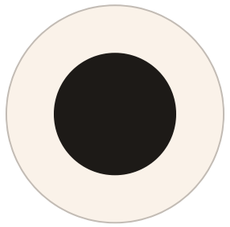

Signal orange on a light background does not have enough contrast for text. Keep it for the full stop and other decoration, and use Signal Deep when orange text is needed.

Graphic devices.

To keep the brand calm and recognisable, we use only a few graphic devices.

The rule

A solid Ink line with one short Signal segment. A short rule sits above main titles. A full-width rule closes the bottom edge of posts, cards and covers.

The point

Headline statements end in a Signal full stop, and questions in a Signal question mark. One per headline.

Rounded panels

Boxes and buttons have rounded corners. Dark Ink panels are used for calls to action and useful information.

Icons.

We use one simple set of line icons to support the text.

Icons

Icons help people find their situation quickly: a house for property tax, a document for an HMRC letter, a building for business tax, people for family and private client matters.

They are always a thin Ink line, never filled or coloured, and never used in place of the logo.

Illustrations

KK Tax does not use illustrations, cartoons or clip art. Where a picture is needed, use photography (see the next page).

Return to contents page

Where they come from

The icons are from Lucide, a free open-source set (lucide.dev), drawn at a 1.75 line weight. Any icon from that set will match.

Photography.

Real people and real places. Kishan is the face of the firm.

Do

- Use photographs of Kishan and the team, in black and white.
- Use the coin film and its stills as the signature image.
- Choose photos that are relevant, calm and uncluttered.
- Use sharp, high-resolution images.

Don’t

- Use staged stock photos: handshakes, piles of cash, calculators.
- Use pixelated or stretched images.
- Suggest a guaranteed saving or result.
- Copy images from Google without knowing the licence.

Consent

Only publish a photograph of a client, or anything that identifies them, with their written consent. Tax matters are confidential.

Templates.

Our templates help keep a consistent, professional look across everything we send.

Whether it is a letter in Word, a proposal in PowerPoint or an email, starting from the template means the logo, colours and fonts are already right.

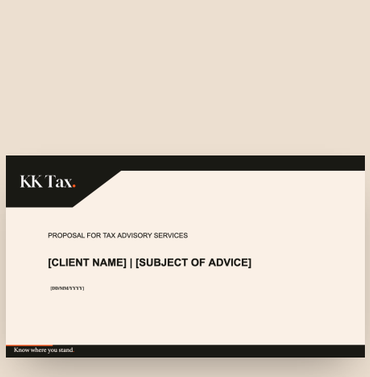

They save time and remove guesswork.

- ✓ Don’t forget the three ready-made social posts in the brand pack: files 10 to 12.

Return to contents page

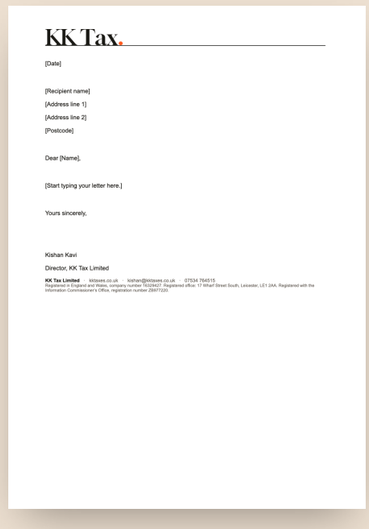

Where to find them

The Word and PowerPoint templates are in the “For Kishan” folder. The email signature, business card and letterhead PDFs are in the brand pack.

PowerPoint template

For proposals and presentations. Replace the text in square brackets and keep the layouts as they are.

Word template

For letters and advice notes. The logo and company details are already in the header and footer.

Email signature

One signature for every email, so each message carries the logo, name, number and website.

Video call backgrounds.

Backgrounds in the brand style, for Teams, Zoom and Google Meet calls with clients and other advisers.

The logo sits in the top corner, clear of your head and shoulders. There is a light and a dark version: choose whichever contrasts with what you are wearing.

Where to find them

In the brand pack, files 21 and 22. In Teams choose Effects and avatars, then Add new, and upload the file.
